We have decided on your submission to Ettisal: Journal of Communication, "STRANGER AND HOSTCULTURE COMMUNICATION (The Bugis and Ternate People)".

1. We see that this piece can be a potential issue if you provide an English version; especially adding foreign authors to proofread it.

2. The article submitted must be a blind version for blind review.

3. The article used the citation manager as Zotero or Mendeley or others. It's good to go.

We decided to: First Stage Revision Required.

Thank you for considering this request.

Dear Editorial Team,

Thank you for your email and the constructive feedback regarding our submission, "Stranger and Host-Culture Communication (The Bugis and Ternate People)."

We acknowledge the points raised and confirm the following steps will be taken:

1. English Version & Proofreading: We will prepare an English version of the manuscript and engage qualified foreign authors/proofreaders to ensure linguistic and academic quality.
2. Blind Review Compliance: The revised submission will strictly adhere to the journal's blind review guidelines, with all identifying author information removed.
3. Citation Management: We confirm the use of Zotero/Mendeley for citations and will verify consistency before resubmission.

We appreciate the opportunity to revise and will submit the updated manuscript within the stipulated timeframe. Should further adjustments be required, please do not hesitate to inform us.

Thank you for your response. Here we attach a comments from Reviewers

Reviewer B (introduction - half of result)
1. In the introduction, a research inquiry ought properly to begin with a kind of “curation” of prior studies. This is because any given research is, in many respects, a “replication” or re-articulation of earlier investigations from various vantage points. In this regard, studies concerning acculturation and cultural communication require more extensive citation. For example:
a. https://equityhealthj.biomedcentral.com/articles/10.1186/s12939-015-0250-3
b. https://www.tandfonline.com/doi/full/10.1080/1360080X.2024.2423321?af=R
c. https://francis-press.com/papers/13678
d. https://www.taylorfrancis.com/books/mono/10.4324/9780203895641/american-indian-education-matthew-fletcher
e. https://www.tandfonline.com/doi/abs/10.1080/01973531003738387

2. This Methodology section is already sufficiently detailed and well-articulated. However, in the part devoted to data analysis, the actual practice ought to be made explicit. For instance: was the data processed with the aid of software, or not at all? Was the analysis conducted merely through a linguistic approach? Or perhaps through a phonetic lens? Or rather, was the data examined by way of an interpretive methodology?

3. In studies of cultural acculturation or intercultural communication, beyond keywords and principles, it is also necessary to reveal the narratives, derivative slogans, as well as the various gimmicks or peculiarities that attend such phenomena. For instance, in Javanese custom one finds the keyword monggo (please), which is at times accompanied by a slight bow of the body and a smile. The word monggo may also be spoken while walking, uttered in a somewhat fragmented fashion according to local intonation—nggo—and then receives a response such as nggih (yes) or others. Furthermore, in the research method it is stated that observation and direct experience in communication were employed. This, of course, significantly supports what I have emphasized above. In this section, the narrative and philosophical elements connected to culture and tradition are already presented in sufficient detail. Yet, it is the practical dimension that would indeed be more engaging to elaborate upon, particularly from the perspective of communication.

Since waiting from reviewer A (result - conclusion), you can revise this draft.

sincerely

Response to Comments from Reviewer B

We sincerely thank Reviewer B for their thorough, insightful, and constructive feedback. The comments have been invaluable in helping us strengthen the manuscript, particularly in grounding our research within the existing literature and enriching the practical and communicative dimensions of our analysis. We have carefully addressed each point raised. repair file has been attached.

Thank you for publishing our work. However, upon double-checking, I noticed there are still some data changes in this version. I hope our writing can still be published (with these corrections)
